INTERLOCUTORY ORDER GRANTED W. END OWNERS

Order Continues Temporary Injunction Issued by Clerk Recently —Plaintiffs Offer Testimony in Hearing

CITY ENTERS NO FORMAL DENIAL OF ALLEGATIONS

An interlocutory order, a continuance of the present temporary restraining injunction granted West End property owners against the Humbard Construction company and the city, was granted by Judge J. G. Forrester at the hearing in Harlan yesterday afternoon. The order was granted in response to plaintiff's request that the injunction be made permanent. Defendants made no motion to have the injunction dissolved and filed no written denial.

The order does not amount to a permanent injunction nor one of a mandatory nature. It is the district judge's affirmation of the temporary injunction recently issued by the clerk and will restrain defendants from doing further construction work until the conditions complained of in the petition are remedied or until it is dissolved by the court.

Plaintiffs, represented by John Howard, offered testimony to support the contentions of the original petition. A. C. Carr testified that the concrete which the construction company had started to make was not up to the standard. Albert Young and F. A. Chickston, authorities on concrete making testified that the slag would not make a good quality of concrete. J. H. McGiboney and R. P. Crockett also testified.

Other testimony to prove that the water main is not of sufficient size was introduced.

No members of the Humbard Construction company were present. R. L. Maddox, city attorney, represented the defendants.

From statements of both parties to the suit it is understood that no move will be made by either, that the work will be left in its present unfinished state. One of the plaintiffs stated this morning that he did not believe that the paving would ever be done. The Humbard Construction company is apparently the least interested party to the suit, having made no effort to have the injunction removed.

YOUNG INDIANAPOLIS WOMEN PASS THROUGH THE MAGIC CITY

Three young women of Indianapolis two weeks ago decided to spend their vacation in Clinchport, Virginia. And since one of the three had a Velie it was decided that the trip should be made overland.

The three young women are in Middlesboro today en route from Clinchport to Indianapolis. They are Miss Elsie Carter, Miss Gladys Calvert, and Mrs. Hannah Waldon. They came by way of Cincinnati and are planning to return by way of Louisville.

In spite of the bad roads, the worst of which they say they found in Tennessee, they have made the trip so far on one set of tires and have not had a single puncture.

They stopped in Middlesboro long enough to drive over the city and to inquire the best way from here to Louisville.

They report an enjoyable vacation. They spent a week with Mrs. W. F. Stearns in Clinchport.

Then it contentedly toddles away.

COUNTRY HAS BIG SUPPLY HARD COAL

Enough to Last Four Months Official Report Says—Fuel Crisis Not Probable

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON Aug. 22.—Sufficient stocks of hard coal are in storage to supply normal requirements for more than four months, according to a government survey made since the controversy between anthracite miners and operators reached the stage where to discontinue the production seemed a possible outcome. With a danger shortage averted by the possession of this great stock the opinion expressed in government circles is that the only problem now will be distribution. Assurance from the White House that the public need fear no fuel crisis is interpreted as indicating that President Coolidge is ready to throw government aid in this direction in the event of an emergency.

KENTUCKY SUMMER SCHOOLS ARE FILLED WITH AMBITIOUS STUDENTS

FRANKFORT Ky., Aug. 22.—In his efforts to further his education to attain the new standards advocated by the Department of Education Alex Walker, 49 years old, traveled approximately 1,250 miles during the sessions of the summer school in Hardin county this year. Prof. Charles D. Lewis, director of summer schools said today. Mr. Walker, who has been teaching school twelve years, traveled 25 miles each way to attend the summer school in Hardin county, according to Prof. Lewis.

During the session of the summer school Mr. Walker, who is a farmer of Hart county as well as a teacher, missed but five days. His absence in this case was caused by serious illness and death in his family. He had but one year of high school work and was going to the school for further training in his profession.

Other instances of hardships suffered by pupils in the teacher training schools of the state were encountered by Prof. Lewis. From a mountain county he received work that most of the pupils came from home every day to attend school, riding home back in most cases, from four to eleven miles each way. In another county, according to Prof. Lewis two girls walk three miles each day to school and never are late for classes.

Owsley county has sent the following message to Prof. Lewis: "Spirit fine. Many come four to eight miles each day. Rain and mud can't stop them. We will organize the county to fight for better schools and a better community."

Russell county sent this: "Four girls walk four miles to school when horses are needed at home. Others drive eight miles night and morning. Attendance in classes running from ninety to ninety-six per cent."

It probably would have been on time but for fogs in Wyoming which, despite three starts, the aviator was unable to negotiate. This plane about noon today passed the Cleveland White plane from east which reached Reno, Nav., several hours earlier. Meanwhile two other planes hoped off from New York and from San Francisco carrying a second consignment of mail.

NEW LOW RECORD GASOLINE PRICE

Western Retailers Sell at Six Cents—No Change in Local Retail Prices

By Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—Gasoline dropped to six cents a gallon at one service station here yesterday. Roy Gehr, the proprietor, said he was interested in a small refinery which was experimenting with a new process and which could make a small profit at six cents.

Local retailers say there has been no further decline in prices here. It is still twenty-five cents per gallon at uptown stations.

One retailer says gasoline has been quoted to him at eleven cents per gallon but that the delivery charges and transportation tax would make it twenty cents. These items, he said, were responsible for high prices in places distant from refineries.

REUNION MORGAN'S VETS YESTERDAY

Aged Vets of Lost Cause Assemble at Estill Springs In Annual Reunion

ESTILL SPRINGS, Ky., Aug. 22.—Veterans who followed the fortunes of General John H. Morgan the gallant and dashing confederate cavalry leader, were here yesterday at opening of their twentieth annual reunion. The reunion, which is held under the auspices of the Morgans Men Association, will continue Wednesday and Thursday. Some of the veterans arrived last night, but most of them were to get here today to spend another brief reunion in fighting over again the battles in which they participated sixty years ago.

Age and weakness that attends it will prevent many of the surviving members from attending this year. Death has decimated the ranks of the old brigade, having taken some of its most popular leaders, including General Basil Duke, Captain Steve Sharp and Dr. John A. Lewis, the Georgetown physician-poet, within recent years. Horace M. Taylor, secretary for life sent out letters asking that all members who possibly could do so to attend the session this year.

The youngest of Morgan's men is now past seventy years of age and the oldest more than ninety, according to the records of the association kept by Captain Taylor.

Most of the members of Morgan's Men were prominent, prosperous and influential in their various communities, and Captain Taylor reports that, with few exceptions, the health of the members is as good as could be expected in men who have reached their age.

The first session of the association's reunion was held yesterday and the final session, which will include the election of officers, will take place Thursday morning.

COOLIDGE PRESIDENT OF AMERICAN BOY SCOUTS

The Boy Scouts of America received yesterday a letter from President Coolidge accepting the honorary presidency of that organization. The President wrote:

"You may be assured of my readiness to accept the honor of the presidency of the Boy Scouts of America, as other Presidents have done from the organization of the Scouts. I esteem this post as one of the incidental duties of a President, and likewise, one of the most agreeable among them. I have always been deeply interested in the work of the Scouts, which I regard as an ideal mode of citizenship development and character construction. Both my sons are scouts, and my observation of the benefits they have derived from their affiliation has strengthened my conviction of the organization's usefulness. I shall be glad to render any proper service I can do to the organization at any time."

The Boy Scouts have just conducted a roundup, with the active cooperation of the late President Harding, resulting in a net increase in membership of 104,701 men and boys, making the total today 617,701.

A THOUGHT

Whoso boasteth himself of a false gift is like clouds and wind without rain.—Prov. 25:14.

We wound our modesty, and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them.—Shakespeare.

KEEP OUR NEW STREET CLEAN

The old street along the business section of town, with its mudholes and other unattractive features, was not seriously damaged in appearance by the rubbish with which it was daily littered. There was no excuse for the untidy habit then, of course, but we did not really consider it a street but a sort of city dumping ground.

Now, however, things are different. We have the best street for four blocks that science can build, that money can buy. It will be paid for, every dollar of it, by the hard-earned money of the abutting property owners. It is, in effect, their street; a section of property over which the public has a permanent easement of travel.

It is to their interest, primarily, to keep the street in front of their business places clean, as tidy as they do the floors of their stores. The habit of sweeping trash from stores into the street, an old custom that has not been abandoned since the making of the new pavement, is one that should be discontinued at once. Not only is it a violation of a city ordinance but it is a filthy habit that constantly keeps our street in a littered and unsanitary condition.

The new street is already becoming cluttered with garbage of all descriptions, a condition that detracts from its newness of appearance. Some of this is caused by careless pedestrians who promiscuously throw papers and other rubbish at any place where it becomes useless to them. No small part of it, however, is swept from the stores along the avenue.

There should be, as we have previously contended, garbage receptacles for waste matter. These, located at convenient intervals, would do much to remedy the untidy condition. But until this system is put into effect the streets can be kept clean only by individual efforts and providential showers of rain.

SECRETARY TO THE PRESIDENT

The appointment of C. Bascom Slemp, of Virginia, as secretary to President Coolidge takes the politicians and the country by surprise. It has been assumed that Mr. Coolidge would name to that post either the man who has served as his secretary since he came to Washington as vice-president, or some other close personal and political friend from his native New England. His unexpected choice doubtless will set many curious folk to wondering about the reasons behind it.

Mr. Slemp the secretary designated, is a native Virginian, two years older than his new chief. Elected to the house in 1917, to fill a vacancy created by the death of his father, he served continuously in that body until this year. He was the only republican sent to the Sixty-seventh congress by Virginia. A democrat succeeds him in the Sixty-seventh. Whether it is his long congressional service and experience that led to his selection by President Coolidge or the latter's desire to have about him some representative and interpreter of southern republicanism or personal liking or consideration of "political expediency" is not yet clear.

The reason first suggested above, in the absence of an explanation from Mr. Coolidge himself is just as plausible as the others and finds color of support in the present republican line-up at Washington. "Massachusetts, there she is," in the high official house: Lodge of Massachusetts party leader in the senate; Gillett of Massachusetts speaker of the house; Weeks of Massachusetts secretary of war. The President may very well decide that a little leavening of this Massachusetts influence, by the addition of a Virginia republican to his official family, would be a wise and "tactical" start-off for his administration.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

One month ago not one politician in 100 suggested Cal Coolidge as even a remote possibility in the 1924 campaign. Had Harding lived, the same odds would have run against the likelihood of Coolidge's renomination even for vice president.

But today, through the interposition of Fate, as the actual occupant of the White House, one could find even money that he will head his party's ticket in the next campaign.

But if you listen closely, perhaps you can hear a gritting, grating sound coming from the direction of the District of Columbia.

That's the political grindstone, turning 24 hours a day.

The loud buzzing that comes as an occasional over-tone is the swarming of the political bees.

When they settle, something's going to get stung. But who?

Ah-h! That's the question!

THE TRITENESS OF TROUBLE

(By Wickes Wamboldt.)

A philosopher said, "I keep my troubles to myself. They bore my friends and gratify my enemies."

It is not a good idea to make a practice of parading troubles. People grow tired of hearing them.

It makes no difference how much we think of an individual, if that individual is constantly recounting his or her troubles, we shall eventually become weary of it. For we have troubles of our own. Troubles are commonplace, everyday things. The world is full of them.

When a vital difficulty afflicts us, then we can go to our friends and acquaintances with it. They will rise to an emergency and will help us over the peak. But they do not want to carry us around on a pillow all the time; they want us to take hold of our problems and work them out just as they are working out theirs. That is what this world is for. It is a place in which to learn how to meet and solve certain kinds of problems.

I have an acquaintance who tires me to death with his petty difficulties. If he gets two postage stamps stuck together, he talks about it for five minutes. The twinge is his tooth is an occasion for a lugubrious dissertation. He bothers me mussing up good conversation with trifling inharaonies. He bores me too. You know him. His name is Legion.

Keep your troubles to yourself you need definite assistance. And don't call on people around you for too much help, either. We have just so much credit in that direction, and when that is used up, folks are loath to extend us more.

Furthermore, we often do not need assistance when we think we do. We could handle the situation ourselves if we made the proper effort. I am reminded of a man who fell from a Mississippi River boat. He began to flounder and scream for help. The captain shouted to him. "Stand on your feet, you durned fool!" The man did. The water was only four feet deep.

Stand on your feet and look the world in the eye. If you get knocked down, stand up again and look the world in the eye some more. It will get to be a habit.

AN INTIMATE STORY OF INNERMOST EMOTIONS REVEALED IN PRIVATE LETTERS

Copyright 1923—NEA Service Inc

LETTER FROM ABRAM EINSTEIN TO JACOB BLOOM

My dear Jake:

I cannot thank you enough for the introduction you gave me that evening in New York at the Biltmore Cascade to that little French girl, Paula Perier.

I knew the minute I looked at her that she was destined to be something big in motion pictures and, though you were pretty mad, old chap, because I snatched her away from your cloak and suit shop, I knew I could do much more for her on my lot than you could do in cloaks and suits.

I did not tell you at the time, but I worked fast. I saw that she had something in the back of her head—and eyes, what a face! You bet I took the chance. What's a little railroad fare? She'll make good and she'll make good money for me.

There is a mysterious something about her, but it gets you every time. It is more than the old worn-out sex appeal. You know that French accent of hers. Well, she's almost able to get even that on the screen.

Now I want you to tell me something about her. Do you know if she has had a love affair? She gives everybody the cold shoulder out here. Will not go out alone to lunch even with me. I had manage to take her to the Cocoanut Grove to make up a party and pay for it. It was damned expensive, too.

I don't mind telling you that I am stuck on her and I wish you would write and tell me all that you know about her. She certainly is going to be a money maker. One of my directors told me the other day that there was no reason why she shouldn't be a star in less than a year if I would give him the entire charge of her for that time.

Of course I knew what he wanted and I told him that I was in no hurry to make the girl a star, and that I much preferred to have her work under a number of directors then to have her come before the public with the stamp of one man's direction sticking out all over her.

By the way, I have just hired a brilliant young man from the east and put him in my production manager's office. He is a whiz with cost figures and as soon as he learns the picture end of it I think I will have a find. You will see me in New York soon, but before that I hope to hear from you about Paula.

Sincerely,

Abe

TO CELEBRATE BEGINNING OF PETROLEUM INDUSTRY

TITUSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 21.—Sixty four years ago Colonel E. L. Drake "struck oil" at Titusville, foretelling in what has since became the great petroleum industry of the country. He was the pioneer, and to celebrate his achievement a large body of representative oil and gas men will assemble here beginning August 27, the day upon which Colonel Drake's well actually sent forth its precious fluid.

The event has been celebrated in previous years locally, but this time plans have been laid to make the observances national, both in character and regional representation.

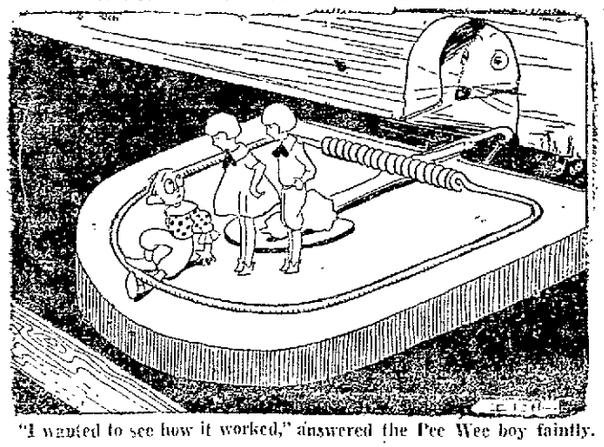
In addition to the reunion and social features of the program, there will be heard practical messages from the leaders in the business today, with A. C. Bedford, chairman of the board of directors of the Standard Oil Company, as the chief speaker.

Colonel Drake was guided in a remarkable manner in the sinking of his first well. Had he drilled any one of the thousands of wells which have been drilled since then, he would not have struck oil in any one of them at the same depth and in the same formation as in the discovery well. There have been many wells as shallow, and shallower, in other formations, but the original well was in a class by itself. The depth at which oil was found was in it is given in the record as 69 1-2 feet, or less than half the depth to even the first sand in that locality.

Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 17—WHAT HAPPENED TO PAUL PRY



"I wanted to see how it worked," answered the Pee Wee boy faintly.

"Ding, ding, ding, dong!" went the school bell in Pee Wee Land.

Nancy and Nick heard it the minute they turned the corner.

"Good lands! What's that for, do you s'pose?" cried Nancy. "There's no school now. This is vacation."

"Hurry up!" said Nick, starting to run. "Maybe there's a fire."

But there wasn't any more fire than there is in the refrigerator, my dears. However, there was quite as much excitement as if there had been forty fires.

King Snookums was rushing about, and every Pee Wee was rushing about and looking in all the houses and down all the holes and up all the bushes and weeds and everywhere.

The Twins knew the trouble at once. "Somebody's lost. I'll bet you anything," said Nancy.

And that's what it was. Little Paul Pry Pee Wee was gone.

"What's everything making such a fuss about?" demanded Nick. "You don't ring bells when the other Pee Wees are lost."

"Oh, but that's different," declared Mrs. Pry Paul's mother. "They're not my Paul. He's the most inquisitive boy in Pee Wee Land and I never get a minute's peace with him poking around. I'm sure he's down the well, or something. Oh, my poor Polly Pry Pee Wee."

"We'll help to hunt," said Nancy. "We have good luck finding things, so don't worry. We'll get him. Come on, Nick."

The Twins looked everywhere and were just about to give up when they passed Farmer Brown's mouse trap near the out-barn. Then they heard a faint voice calling.

"Goodness alive! There's somebody in the mouse trap," said Nancy. "Peep in, Nick, but be careful."

So Nick stuck in his head.

"Hello! Hello, Paul Pry Pee Wee," Nancy heard him say. "How did you get there?"

"I wanted to see how it worked," answered the Pee Wee boy faintly. "I hardly touched it at all when it snapped down on my foot. I can't move."

The Twins worked like tailors and by 'n' by Paul Pry was set free.

"Oh, thank you," he cried, limping off toward home. "I'll never monkey with anything again. I'm cured."

Berton Braley's Poem

TAKE HIM AWAY

Hot weather I don't so much mind:
When other folks say, "Ain't it terrible."
I often remark that I find
The state of the climate quite bearable:
The one thing that gets on my nerves
And fills me with bile and acridity
Is when some wise hoze observes,
"It isn't the heat—it's humidity!"

Whenever that statement is made
You'd think that the bird who presented it
Had done it without any aid,
Had studied it out and invented it!
Whereas I most firmly believe
This phrase, in its utter stupidity,
Was whispered by Adam and Eve.
"It isn't the heat, it's humidity."

It's hard, very hard to forgive
The lad who inquires, "Is it hot enough?"
And though we should not let him live,
Of fellows like that we have shot enough.
But—fool-killer, look to your work!
Remove from our midst with rapidity
That guy who remarks with a smirk,
"It isn't the heat, it's humidity."

Song of Thrysis

The turtle on you withered bough.
That lately mourned her murdered mate,
Has found another comrade now—
Such changes all await!
Again her drooping plume is drest
Again she's willing to be blest,
And takes her lover to her nest.

If nature has decreed it so
With all above, and all below,
Let us like them forget our woe.
And not be killed with sorrow
If I should quit your arms tonight
And chance to die before 'twas light,
I would advise you—and you might—
Love again to-morrow.

Your Health

Insulin

Insulin, the new patent preparation for the treatment of diabetes, is the discovery, if such it may be called, of Dr. Fred G. Banting of Toronto, Canada.

Many efforts have been made during the past 20 years to carry the results of experiments in the use of pancreas extracts into the field of therapeutics No direct success was attained as the extracts contained some protein matter which rendered hypodermic administration unsafe

Dr. Banting is the first to arrive at a real logical conclusion. Quite a large number of patients have been under successful treatment during the past six months.

The idea that a properly prepared extract of the pancreas, freed of its digestive action, would be of great benefit in the treatment of diabetes was confirmed. It was experimentally tested in the laboratory and found to show surprising results. First with animals, then with great caution, on real patients.

Insulin seems to have the power of allowing the diabetes organism to burn sugar, thus causing sugar in the urine to disappear and blood sugar to drop to normal.

It has been given to patients to bring them out of diabetic coma long enough to overcome serious infections. Surgical operations, under its use, may be performed on the severest cases of diabetes. Best of all, it is claimed that it will permit development and growth in children and young adults where formerly there was no hope.

Insulin is given to the patient, hypodermically, three times a day before meals. It cannot be used without careful diet control and must be administered by a physician

To the sufferer from diabetes this new treatment—it is not yet termed a cure—comes as a welcome boon, almost a call to new life and action.

RELAX LIKE THIS FOR A FEW MINUTES AFTER COMING HOME FARM WORK

BEAUTY EXERCISES

Having devoted the previous articles to the matter of diet and exercise, I want in this last one to preach a little sermon on something that is just as important as either of these for the women who wants to stay young and beautiful.

My subject today is relaxation.

Ten minutes of complete relaxation is as good as a nap. During the day take a few minutes off every now and then, let your worries slip from your mind and your arms become limp Rest your head against the back of your chair to remove the tension from your neck and shoulders. That's not complete relaxation, but it's good for you.

Here's the way to relax completely Flop down on a couch or bed with your arms limp and your legs outstretched. Put a black cloth over your eyes and "see black." For 10 or 15 minutes just concentrate on black. If colors float before your eyes, you are cheating.

Keep Mind Alert

Do this when you come home from the office or before you go out to dinner or at whatever time in the day your vitality reaches its lowest ebb. It will refresh your mind and body, strengthen your eyes and make them much more brilliant.

Let me advise you always to keep before yourself the mental picture of what you really wish to be.

Think Youth if you want to stay young.

As you walk along, think of keeping your chest up and your step springy. Don't let yourself droop and sag. Your mind will start doing the same thing.

Child Stunts

Don't forget as you grow older to keep up some of the beautifiers you practiced as a matter of course when you were a child. Remember how you loved to jump rope and how you skipped as lightly as a feather? Ten minutes of skipping rope every day would do more for your figure than any other exercise you could indulge in.

You enjoyed running, too, didn't you? You would still enjoy it if you would let yourself. Take a good run whenever you get a chance. You need not start out to do a marathon, but a brisk sprint outside will give you lots of pep. Lacking a vacant lot or a country road, don't despise the gymnasium or the hall.

Keep your thoughts and enthusiasms young. Don't let your mind grow old and it won't set a bad example for your body.

The girls all "pooh pooh" the British Tennis Association's ruling barring newspaper photographers from the Wimbledon meet.

But they believe Mme Suzanne Lenglen and other women net stars might well adopt the one piece bathing costumes for their playing garb.

FARM PROGRESS SHOWN AT FAIR

Many Interesting Features Planned For Coming State Fair at Lexington

LEXINGTON, Ky., Aug. 22.—Looking forward in agriculture to better farms, homes and communities and satisfied boys and girls, will be the general theme around which the exhibit of the College of Agriculture at the coming state fair will be built, according to an announcement by N. R. Elliott, who is in charge of the preparation of the display. Ten departmental exhibits being planned by the different divisions of the agricultural college will touch on this theme.

The importance of holding down the cost of producing farm products if the largest profits are to be obtained will be brought out in the exhibit of the farm management section, while the marketing division will show that closer grading of farm products before marketing is a forward step that every farmer can take with profit. The exhibit of the poultry section will have two features, one of which will show the advantages of the type of poultry house being recommended for Kentucky conditions and the other the value of feeding skim milk to laying hens.

The amount of fruit and vegetables that a family of five should use and the kind of a garden that it takes to furnish these will be pointed out in the exhibit of the home economics department. How to install a water supply system in the farm home and the number of miles of walking that such a system saves the housewife will be demonstrated in the farm engineering exhibit, while the horticultural exhibit will be a demonstration of how to control the peach tree borer by the use of paradichlorobenzine, the new chemical treatment for the pest.

The annual loss to Kentucky families through poor gardens and the prizes to follow in making the garden worth while will be brought out in the vegetable exhibit. The animal husbandry exhibit will explain how stomach worms, the worst pest of sheep in the state, can be controlled with either bluestone or nicotine sulphate and the dairy exhibit will stress the increased yields of milk and butterfat that can be had through the use of purebred sires.

The merits of the root resistant strain of burley tobacco developed by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, how Kentucky soils can be built up through the use of limestone and phosphate and the accomplishments of junior agricultural club members in their project work will be shown in other exhibits. As in former years the college exhibit will be housed in the Grandstand building.

FARM AND HOME NEWS FROM OVER KENTUCKY

Allen county farm boys and girls are learning the details of fattening pigs for the market by feeding 154 Poland China and Duroc Jersey pigs as their junior agricultural club project under direction of the College of Agriculture and County Agent D. G. Trice.

In order to show Ballard county farmers and their wives how to go over their poultry flocks at this time of the year and pick out the poor layers that have stopped laying until spring, County Agent E. A. Whalin plans to hold 30 or more poultry culling demonstrations in different parts of the county before the summer is over.

Farmers in Calvert City community of Marshall county have plans completed for the building of a limestone storage shed and the purchase of a supply of limestone so that they can get the material to their farms without delay, a report from County Agent H. R. Cottrell says.

Christian county farmers are showing an increased interest in the value of terraces to save their fileds from washing and leaching, County Agent H. G. Cress says. A number of demonstrations have been scheduled for ferent parts of the county to show recommended methods of building terraces.

Five Boyd county farmers have completed plans to buy purebred Jersey heifers as foundation stock for purebred herds which they intend to build up on their farms, according to a report of County Agent L. M. Amburgey.

SWEDEN FACES NEED OF HELPING FARMERS

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 22.—A crucial problem in Sweden has arisen from the failure of agriculture to keep pace with the general recovery from post-war depression. In the effort to help the farmers to fairer profits on their labor and investments, the Riksdag and government have studied the question of restricting the imports of grain, and efficiency experts, following scientific agricultural research, have suggested ways and means of reducing the cost of production. But all this, so far, has been of little help.

The farmers are at the economic disadvantage because, while the general price index in Sweden has come down to 70 per cent above the pre-war price level, the selling price for grain has been forced down to 10 per cent above the pre-war level.

A crying need at present is the downward revision of wages for farm labor, which are more than 60 percent above the average for 1914.

A conference of experts has been called by the Ministre of Agriculture, and it is rumored that the question of state credit has been taken up with the idea of advancing loans to enable the farmer to hold over his grain for better prices.

THIS YEAR'S GARDEN

Cultivation is one of the important things to be watched in raising late potatoes. The ground should have frequent shallow cultivations rather than deep plowings and by all means should be left as nearly level as possible after each working. All weeds should be kept down in the rows as they use up much valuable moisture.

Bordeaux mixture applied as intervals of ten to 15 days will keep down diseases in the potato patch. Paris green or arsenate of lead will keep down the damage from insects and one of these poisons should be put on as soon as the potatoes are about six inches high.

Celery needs constant care at this season of the year to make sure that all weeds are kept down and that the ground is loose. The dirt should be worked up to the rows gradually to fill the trenches in which the plants are set.

Taking out all early tomato plants as soon as they have finished bearing will get rid of good harboring places for insects and diseases that may attack the late plants.

Late carrots, spinach and late beets need careful attention to keep the ground loose and keep weeds from choking the young plants.

Don't Play Foot-Ball with the Railroads

The railroad is probably the most legislated thing in the world.

At present, there are ninety-nine agencies having the power of placing various forms of regulation upon the transportation system of the country.

Last year there were 134 bills in Congress and 228 in the various State Legislatures designed to further control railroad operations. Some of these measures were, perhaps, wise, but most of them were introduced by "prominent grandstand politicians" who devote most of their public career to the promulgation of unsound and ill-timed legislation designed to hamper the work of the railroads.

The great transportation industry of America is of too much importance to every man, woman and child of the Nation to be fettered and impeded in its operations by being made a stepping stone for the politically ambitious.

To quote from a well-posted financial writer:

"Efficient transportation is born in private management, runs on private capital, and thrives on competition. ----- ------ More regulation, limitation, forced consolidation, or whatever form additional legislation might take, would serve only to harden the arteries of transportation; arteries which are already walled in by all the regulation they can stand. Organized public opinion should recognize steam transportation as a necessary unit in the general scheme of things, and not a National foot-ball."

The railroads are working out their problems; they are making good; and all that they want is to be allowed to operate under the existing laws of the Nation without interference from radical politicians, law-makers and editors.

THE OLD RELIABLE

"Better See if the Motor Needs Oil"

Get in the habit of saying this to your dealer whenever you stop for gasoline, water or air. Remember, that the only way you can tell whether or not your motor needs oil is; first, by the simple way of looking at the guage, and second, by the expensive way of finding out too late that cylinders have been scored and bearings burned thru your forgetting to keep up the supply of oil.

Sufficient quantity, the right quality, the proper weight or grade of oil, and the replacing of oil after it has been worn out by six or seven hundred miles of running—these are the important things to watch; and, given proper attention, you can avoid the bother and expense of most motor troubles.

Be safe—be sure—and be satisfied by putting nothing in your crank case but

"WORSE THAN PAIN"

Louisiana Lady Says She Has "Never Found Anything Better Than Cardui for a Run-Down Condition."

Morgan City, La.—"It would be hard for me to tell how much benefit I have derived from the use of Cardui," said Mrs. I. G. Bowman, of 1319 Front Street, this city.

"I was so run-down in health I could hardly go. I was thin. I had no appetite. Could not rest or sleep well. I was so weak, and so very nervous, I was no pleasure to myself.

"I suffered some pain, but the worst of my trouble was from being so weak and easy to get tired and out of heart.

"This nervous condition was worse than pain.

"Some one told me of Cardui, and I decided to use it.

"After using a few bottles, I regained my strength. I wasn't so nervous, and began to eat and sleep, and grew stronger and was soon well.

"I have never found anything better for a run-down condition."

If you suffer as this Louisiana lady did, you, too, should find Cardui helpful for your troubles.

SOLVED THE PROBLEM

"I was almost distracted with stomach trouble, gas and colic attacks and didn't know what to do. I had tried everything I heard of, and the doctor's medicine did not help me. A friend told me about Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, and it has solved the problem, as I can now eat anything and have no distress." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At Lee's and druggists everywhere.
